

Barry Beck on the RIO Grand

“I’ve spent most of my life hunting big trout for my clients, trout that are described in pounds as well as inches. Trout in these sizes are smart and wary and they generally don’t make mistakes. The first cast may be the only cast so it better be right. My key to success is most often a combination of long leaders, the right fly and a fly line that can give me the right presentation. The line color is as important as the profile and I always rely on earthy colors like RIO’s Camo green to blend into the background.

Of all the great profiles that RIO offers my first choice is the RIO Grand. This line meets all of my needs in a floating taper including the ability to properly load my fly rod. It shoots like no other line that I have ever used and it really floats thanks to RIO’s Agent X coating. It gives me the edge I need to fool the most discriminating monster.”
