

Diana Rudolph on RIO's Tarpon Line

“Nothing is as exhilarating and exhausting as balancing on the bow of a skiff in a 20 knot wind... baking in the sun... waiting for that one shot at a giant tarpon. In these extreme conditions, fly line construction and durability are critical for success. The Rio Tarpon Taper performs flawlessly in tropic environments, as it withstands the heat of the sun and a 100-pounder. The slightly heavier line loads quickly and casts well in the wind, and the front taper design turns the fly over delicately when the fish are more sensitive. In addition, the AgentX technology ensures that the line floats high, making it easy to recast and reposition the fly, time after time.”
